It has seemed good to Russia, apparently, to let that feeling be intensified by the utterances of her own high officials. The Russian Minister of War, for instance, has been quoted as volunteering the comment that 'Japan is no good.' It is rather remarkable to me that the mere statement, coming from such a high source has not been enough to start war.

"It took no particular acuteness of observation to see the state of mind of the Japanese. To shout 'Long live great Japan." in the street was enough to start a burrah and a whirlwind of a demonstration. Mr. Kirby believes that if it were not for the British-Japanese offensive and defensive alliance Japan would have been at Russia's threat long before now. Great Britain is bound to fight when Japan fights, and Great Britain doesn't want any more war for a while; she is still sore from her last. How ong the British restraint will be effective-that's the question.

The particular incentive to all this hatred. as Mr. Kirby saw things, is the Russian possession of Port Arthur. The Russians stole Port Arthur from the Japanese after the China-Japan war by a process of interational agreement. Japan will never be content until she gets Port Arthur back. She is willing to risk her national existence She is willing to risk her national existence to take Port Arthur away from the Russians. Russia has Manchuria. The Trans-Siber-ian Railroad runs from the town of Man-churia, on the Siberian border, right down to Port Arthur. Mr. Kirby travelled over the line. The Russians built the road so that it dodged most of the important Manchu towns. But as you travel along the line you find a long succession of Russian towns populated almost exclusively with Russians and with Russians farming the country adjacent to them for many miles back from the railroad

It may be true that Russ'a is going to withdraw her garrisons from Manchuria next fall according to her agreement; but next fall according to her agreement; but she is sending her people overland by the thousand to settle on the land and live on it and occupy it and make their homes on it along the line of the railroad. Siberia is a great country, a beautiful country; but Manchuria is better—it is more fertile. These trainloads of immigrants, and Mr. Kirby passed four or five of them, crammed full, every day, are not being unloaded in Siberia, but in Manchuria. The railroad, to all intents and purposes, runs through Russian territory. The open door is all well enough; but suppose every all well enough: but suppose every at in the house inside that open door is cupied by a stolid Russian who is very

In February, 1902, the Court of King's Bench decided against Viscount Hinton in his suit against his step-brother, the present Earl Poulett, and the latter's mother, to recover the family mansions and estates at Hinton in Somersetshire.

The defendants at that time pleaded that the matter had been decided by the terms of a settlement made in 1953, whereby the claims of the late Earl Poulett's family by his first wife were set aside. The old Earl denied the legitimacy of the claimant, but admitted that he was his father. The claimant under the settlement received an allowance until he reached manhood, an allowance until he reached manhood, but, according to the late Earl, had no claim on the title or estates. CROWD OF SPECTATORS SMALLER THAN WAS EXPECTED.

The Sight, at First Pitiful, Becomes Repulsive-Oregita Wins a Victory Over Rampolla in the College of Cardinals-Increased Support for Vannutelli. Special Cable Despatches to THE SUN.

From THE SUN Correspondent at Rome. ROME, July 23 .- The high ceremonies. practically to be of nine days' duration, which comprise the obsequies of the Pope began this morning at St. Peter's. While they proceeded on one side of the great Cathedral, on the other lay the body of the Pontiff exposed to the gaze of thousands of the faithful and unbelievers of all classes It was a pitiful sight, and before the day ended it became even repulsive. It is doubtful if to-morrow it will be decent or possible to permit the customary lying in state to continue unless the body is inclosed in a metallic coffin. The number of spectators to-day was far less than anticipated. The public to-day was admitted first to the vestibule, and thence, in groups of fifty, to the body of the church, instead of in a continuous line, which resulted in confusion that almost amounted to a riot twenty-five years ago after the death of Pius IX. As the hours advanced the spectators rapidly multiplied, but at no time was there the slightest difficulty in keeping the many thousands in control. Nobody experienced any serious delay in gaining admittance during the first six hours. This was largely due to the excellent police arrangements. On the opposite side of the church, in the choir chapel, where services are usually held, a magnificent catafalque had been erected. In the centre were blocks of black and gold, one above another. The white coffin above was surmounted by the Papal triple crown in gold. Many tapers surrounded it, and throughout the day the members of the Papal choir sang and prelates celebrated requiem masses.

This afternoon there was no restriction of entrance to the church, and it was possible to pass through without the slightest delay or inconvenience. There was great disappointment among the devout Catholics because they were not allowed to kiss the slipper of the dead Pope.

The custom hitherto has been to place the body so that the feet were close to the grating, and the mourners could kiss the cross inscribed on the sole of the slipper. Pope Leo's body is a yard distant from the grating. This is only one of several departures from ancient custom.

The College of Cardinals decided to-day that the burial would take place Saturday night. Cardinal Oreglia nominated Mgr. Tarozzi to make the customary Latin oration in memory of the Pope. Cardinal Rampolla suggested Mgr. Sardi, who was much beloved by Leo, but Mgr. Tarozzi was selected by a large majority.

The meeting also confirmed Cardinal Oreglia's nomination of Mgr. Sardi to deliver the oration on the duties of the college in connection with the selection of a successor to the Pope. The Cardinals instructed Mgr. Merry del Val, secretary of the Conclave, to draft a note for approval to-morrow, which will be transmitted to the Powers, expressing in a mild form a protest of the Church against its deprivation of temporal power.

To-day's meeting again contained some obvious significance bearing on the probable action of the Conclave. It is estimated that Cardinal Rampolla's total strength does not exceed twenty-two votes. Cardinal Rampolla will receive several votes on the first ballot which will probably not be cat for him subsequently. These votes will be by Cardinals who are largely indebted to him

Cardinal Vannutelli, who for the last two years has opposed Cardinal Rampolla's French policy, is gaining some Italian supcandidacy is certainly the most active at the present moment.

It seems probable that, when the Conclave meets, the situation will be reduced to three prominent candidates, Vannutelli, Oreglia and Rampolla. It would not be difficult. as a compromise, to consolidate the Vannutelli and Oreglia forces, perhaps on Cardinal Oreglia, and possibly on some one not yet named; but even then it would be necessary to weaken Cardinal Rampolla's present solid support in order to secure the required two-thirds.

The indications are that it would be hardly reasonable to expect an election in such a short time as at the Conclave of 1878. Cardinals Oreglia and Rampolla are indisposed, but there is nothing serious the matter with them.

The Government has instructed the railways to treat the arriving Cardinals as royal Princes, and to give them special cars, &c. In this and other ways the Italian authorities are acting with a magnanimity that is in marked contrast to the attitude of the Papal officials on the occasion of the assassination of King the death of Cardinal Vaughan: Mgr. Hed-Humbert.

The municipality of Carpineto, Pope Leo's native town, has started a subscription for the erection of a colossal statue of the late Pontiff. It is to be forty metres high and is to stand on the neighboring Mount Capreo, where in his younger days Leo went hunting. Catholics throughout the world have been invited to contribute to the fund for the erection of this memorial. Ernesto Biondi has been selected as the sculptor.

London, July 23.-Some of the British correspondents at Rome say that the interment of the remains of the Pope will probably be hastened. The Cathedral of St. Peter's was closed for an hour this afternoon while further antiseptic injections were made in the body.

To-day was the hottest day of the year in Rome. Some of those waiting to view the body fainted from the effects of the heat, and there were several sunstrokes.

MANY AT CATHEDRAL SERVICE. Catholic Summer School Will Hold the First General Requiem.

An addition to the regular order of the requiem services at the Cathedral was begun yesterday evening when the entire chaplet of the rosary was recited before the altar of the Blessed Virgin. This chapel shows a deeper mourning than any of the others as a recognition of the dead Pope's favorite devotion.

The rosary was given last night by Father William Martin, the newly appointed third assistant pastor of the Cathedral. Fully a thousand persons were present. Around the tabernacle were burning tapers, the stands of which were heavily veiled with

The late mass, which will be celebrated from this morning until the election of a new Pontiff, will be sung at 8:30 o'clock by the Rev. H. O. Hughes of the Cathedral staff This mass will be celebrated at the main altar in the Cathedral proper, while the other masses will be in the chapels.

Dr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the Cathedral, went to Cliff Haven, N. Y., last night to arrange at the Catholic Summer School, of which he is president, what will be the first general requiem service held in this country. Even in the Cathedral the service is parochial. Nothing is so injurious to the child's health as cheap scaps, which fill the pores of the skin with injurious matter, which subsequently enters the system, producing disease and sometimes blood poisoning.

The buby's skin is very delicate and sensitive, and absorbs any injurious matter more easily than at grown person's. Consequently, why endanger the child's health when 25 cents will buy a cake of MEDICURA SOAP, which is recognized as the best Medicated and Antiseptic Soap in the world?

It will not only clean the skin thoroughly, but it will preserve it in a healthy and fresh condition, insuring protection against all contagious diseases.

For Baby's Rash, Itchings and Chaffag use Medicura Soap and no other, and you will have little or no trouble with your baby's health.
